

Ileana Rotaru, PhD, is Associate Professor of West University of Timisoara, Romania (Department of Philosophy and Communication Sciences) and PhD supervisor in Communication Sciences. Her research has been focusing on the trans-disciplinary fields of communication sciences: children/youth and media, ICTs usages, internet effects and digital inequalities, fake news, virtual communities and cultural identity in multiethnic social environments, especially of Roma, digital citizenship and media education. Her latest researches and publications are focusing on antigypsyism and online hate speech and educational policies concerning media education in Romania. She is an external expert for Save the Children Romania (responsible for training programs in media literacy), ERGO (European Roma Grassroots Organization) and different non-governmental national organizations. She is a member of ECREA and expert member of the Romanian Ministry of Education Special Commission for continuing professional training programs.