

Colonel (Ret.) Cezar Ilie MEDVICH

Colonel (Ret.) Cezar Ilie Medvichi is a former senior officer of the Romanian Ministry of Internal Affairs, with extensive experience in law enforcement, internal control, strategic intelligence, and institutional management. He graduated from the “Alexandru Ioan Cuza” Police Academy in Bucharest, Faculty of Law, in 2000, and subsequently, until his retirement from active service in 2026, held a wide range of operational, advisory, analytical, and management positions within several structures of the Ministry.

He began his career in the Romanian Gendarmerie, where he served between 2000 and 2009. His early professional experience included more than six years as a legal adviser at the Bucharest General Directorate of Gendarmes, followed by responsibilities at the level of the General Inspectorate of the Romanian Gendarmerie in the field of preventing and investigating antisocial acts, including the coordination and professional guidance of personnel involved in this area.

Between 2009 and 2014, he served within the Control Body of the Ministry of Internal Affairs, where he carried out inspection and control activities across the Ministry’s structures and subordinate units. During the same period, he coordinated the implementation of the Internal Managerial Control System throughout the Ministry’s public entities, contributing to the development of institutional control, accountability, and management mechanisms.

Beginning in 2014, his professional activity focused on intelligence analysis and strategic assessment within the General Directorate for Internal Protection of the Ministry of Internal Affairs. His work included strategic intelligence analysis, the assessment of risks and threats to national security from the perspective of the internal affairs sector, as well as the preparation of analytical products designed to support strategic-level decision-making. He later headed a structure dedicated to strategic intelligence planning and analysis, coordinating strategic assessment and planning processes and contributing to the analytical substantiation of institutional and national-level decisions.

Between 2017 and 2019, he returned to the Romanian Gendarmerie and held senior management positions at the level of the General Inspectorate. From 2017 to 2018, he served in an acting capacity as Deputy Inspector General, with responsibility for coordinating structures in the areas of cabinet affairs, public relations, international relations, and human resources. From 2018 to 2019, he headed the Directorate for External Non-Reimbursable Funds.

A significant component of his subsequent professional activity focused on monitoring and countering hybrid threats in the field of internal affairs, as well as supporting Romania's participation in Council of the European Union working groups dedicated to strengthening resilience and countering such threats. In this context, among other responsibilities, he contributed to the preparation of national positions and mandates for relevant meetings, as well as to the development of strategic-level analytical products presented by Romania within European cooperation mechanisms.

His professional profile combines senior-level institutional experience, expertise in strategic intelligence, management responsibilities, and practical involvement in European processes in the fields of security and resilience.
