

Ana Revenco is a Moldovan security strategist and public servant who has fundamentally shaped the nation's internal security framework, hybrid defense capabilities, and European integration trajectory.

In October 2023, President Maia Sandu appointed Revenco to found and lead the Centre for Strategic Communication and Countering Disinformation to counter FIMI and safeguard democratic processes. Building the agency from the ground up, she established operational information threat-intelligence networks and mechanisms based on whole of society approach build that directly protected two national elections from foreign information interference—creating a counter-hybrid model now studied as a regional benchmark across EU member states.

As Minister of Internal Affairs (2021–2023), Revenco navigated unprecedented geopolitical turmoil following Russia's invasion of Ukraine, managing the refugee crisis and securing the European Political Community Summit. She firmly anchored Moldova in European security architecture by negotiating the Frontex deployment, EU Partnership Mission, EU Civil Protection Mechanism membership, and establishing the EU Hub for Internal Security.

Earlier, she served as National Defense Advisor to the President (2021), Head of the Center for Combating Trafficking in Persons (2012–2015), and Executive Director of La Strada Moldova (2001–2020). Her career bridges crisis management, institutional building, and diplomacy, establishing her as a core architect of Moldova's national sovereignty.
