Antonia Colibășanu is a geopolitical analyst and academic specializing in geopolitics, geoeconomics, strategic intelligence, and geopolitical risk. She is Chief GeoEconomist and Senior Geopolitical Analyst at the US-based Geopolitical Futures, Senior Associate Expert at the New Strategy Center in Bucharest, and Senior Fellow at the Delphi Global Research Center. She is also Associate Professor of Geopolitics and Geoeconomics at the National University of Political Studies and Public Administration (SNSPA) in Bucharest and a member of the Scientific Council of the Elcano Royal Institute in Spain.

Her research focuses on the interaction between geography, economic structures, political power, and security, with particular attention to European and Eurasian geopolitics, the Black Sea region, energy security, global trade corridors, and the changing international economic order. Her work combines geopolitical forecasting with the analysis of economic dependencies, strategic competition, and the implications of geopolitical developments for governments, international businesses, and investors.

Before joining Geopolitical Futures in 2016, Dr. Colibășanu spent more than a decade with Stratfor, holding several senior positions, including Partner for Europe and Vice President for International Marketing. She subsequently served as Chief Operating Officer at Geopolitical Futures. She was also a Senior Fellow in the Eurasia Program at the Foreign Policy Research Institute in Philadelphia and previously served as Honorary Adviser to Romania's Minister of Energy. Earlier in her career, she worked with the World Trade Center Association in Bucharest.

She is the author of Geopolitics, Geoeconomics and Borderlands: A Study of a Changing Eurasia and Its Implications for Europe (Springer, 2023), 2022 – The Geoeconomic Roundabout (2022), and Contemporary Geopolitics and Geoeconomics 2.0 (2021). She regularly speaks at international conferences and policy forums, addressing geopolitical developments, economic security, and their implications for international affairs and business.

Dr. Colibășanu holds a PhD in International Business and Economics from the Bucharest University of Economic Studies, where her doctoral research examined country risk and investment decision-making in multinational corporations. She also holds a master's degree in International Project Management and is an alumna of the International Institute on Politics and Economics at Georgetown University.